First quarter 2013 Earnings

Good morning and thanks for joining us today.

I’m going to provide my perspective on the business, Walter will follow my remarks with a review of our results and then we’ll take your questions.

Yesterday afternoon, we reported good first quarter earnings. Overall, Ameriprise is performing well. Assets are up across the firm and we’re generating very strong results in our Wealth Management business. We’re executing our strategy, investing in our growth areas, and strengthening our position in our core businesses.

In terms of the economic environment, I feel better than I did a year ago. Equity markets are stronger in the U.S. and the economy is on more stable ground and growing slowly. Across Europe the markets are a bit weaker consistent with the economic environment there. However, we’re managing the headwinds caused by very low interest rates, although this pressure has been offset by gains in the equity markets.

Walter will take you through the numbers in detail but our financial results reflect a good start to the year.

On an operating basis:
Net revenues grew to $2.6 billion due to strong growth in our fee-based businesses offsetting the negative impact from rates and the loss of bank-related revenues.

Our earnings were $338 million, with earnings per share of $1.59. And return on equity increased to 16.4 percent, which is an all-time high for us. We expect to see ROE continue to improve over the next few quarters.

In addition, our assets under management and administration grew to a record high of $708 billion.
We’re maintaining our strong capital position, generating good free cash flow and increasing our capital returned to shareholders.

During the quarter, we returned $454 million to shareholders, including repurchasing $360 million of our common stock.

As we’ve said, we intend to return the majority of our earnings to our shareholders annually – including the capital freed up from the bank. And we plan to do so in a balanced way, based on the environment and the share price.

As you saw in the earnings release, we announced that we’re increasing our dividend another 16 percent.

With regard to capital, we’re focused on our core businesses and returning capital to shareholders in a prudent manner. We often look at acquisition opportunities and how they could complement our business, but at this point, we don’t see any large properties in the marketplace that meet our acquisition criteria.

With that, let me turn to the business.

Our highlights for the first quarter reflect our progress, opportunities for further growth and our continued focus on areas of improvement

Advice and Wealth Management is producing excellent results as we continued our growth from 2012 into first quarter. Operating net revenues increased 7 percent to $1 billion driven by record retail client net inflows and market appreciation. Operating net revenues increased 10 percent, excluding former banking operations. And operating PTI increased 39 percent and adjusted for the bank it would have been 66 percent.

Operating margin increased to 12.9 percent due to the increase in productivity, our effective expense management and savings we targeted from our reduced technology spend. In fact, the 12.9 percent number included both the impact of lower interest rates on cash balances as well as the loss of the Bank.
Ameriprise advisor client assets grew by 11 percent to $372 billion driven by strong net inflows and equity market appreciation. Client activity continued to pick up with exceptionally strong wrap net inflows growing to $4.1 billion, which is 41 percent higher than a year ago. Productivity is also up nicely with operating net revenue per advisor - excluding former bank operations - growing 9 percent.

Importantly, our advisor force remains strong; retention and satisfaction rates are high. We continue to recruit good, productive and experienced advisors. Because of better markets and the year-end tax season, recruiting has slowed in the first quarter, which is consistent with others in the industry. We do however see a good opportunity to continue to bring in more quality advisors this year.

We’re investing in our growth areas, building our brand through advertising, and increasing efficiency through the tools and technology we provide advisors.

The Ameriprise name was highly visible in the first quarter. We launched the next phase of our national advertising campaign, with spots airing during high-profile sports and entertainment programming, and online video ads. In fact, our ad awareness has doubled with our campaign, so we’re seeing terrific results there.

We also released our latest retirement survey, a continuation of our Retirement Check-In® series, to provide research and support to our advisors and demonstrate our position as a retirement thought leader in the industry.

With regard to our technology platform – which includes our new brokerage platform as well as all of our online capabilities - we’re now focused on helping advisors leverage the benefits of the full suite. This is a priority for us over the next 18-24 months. We invested in this system because we believe it can help our advisors grow productivity and when utilized fully, it will lower costs and enhance our overall client and advisor experience.
One of our largest opportunities for growth is in the retirement space where we’re already a leader. We’re focused on serving the consumer’s overall retirement goals. In fact, we brought out a more consumer friendly approach to enhance our go-to-market positioning. We call it our Confident Retirement approach. It has tested very well with our advisors and consumers, and we’ve just begun to roll it out across our system. Advisors who are using it are finding it to be a very effective way of deepening current relationships and developing new ones. We’re putting a concerted effort toward implementing this more broadly over the next 2 years.

Overall, it was a very good quarter for Advice and Wealth Management and we’re pleased with the progress we’re making in the business. With good flows and productivity, as well as our continued expense management efforts and even with the headwinds from low interest rates, margin is expanding nicely.

In Asset Management, we’re building on our two strong footholds in the U.S. and Europe and establishing a strong global asset management business.

We’re delivering good financial performance while managing a period of outflows, which I’ll discuss further in a moment.

Our assets under management were up 2 percent sequentially to $466 billion driven by market appreciation; however that included the negative impact of foreign exchange which was sizable in the quarter. Operating PTI increased 10 percent reflecting market appreciation and the benefits we’re realizing from our revenue and expense re-engineering efforts. And adjusted net pretax operating margin grew to 34.6 percent from 33.3 percent a year ago.

We have a good product platform in Asset Management which we’re continuing to invest in and grow, in particular within global equities and asset allocation products. Meanwhile, we’re maintaining consistent, competitive investment performance which remains a priority for us.

Regarding flows, Walter will cover the numbers for the quarter, but I wanted to take a moment to explain how we think about Asset Management, the overall strategy we’re executing and what you can expect from a business perspective.
Both of our major acquisitions – Threadneedle and Columbia – gave us asset managers with meaningful portions of assets under management which included mandates from their former parents. That created unique flow characteristics that we continue to manage today.

Threadneedle was part of Zurich, and it managed a significant level of insurance affiliated assets. Our objective was to leverage Threadneedle’s investment platform and asset base to build strong third-party related distribution in both our retail and institutional capabilities to grow higher fee business while managing legacy assets. We’ve been successful in doing this.

Today, legacy insurance mandates represent a smaller percentage of Threadneedle’s AUM. This relationship is important, but we do expect to experience approximately $3-4 billion in outflows of these assets annually given the nature of the book. That said, as we look at the business overall and invest to grow, Threadneedle inflows are higher fee, and we’re seeing that dynamic come through in the P&L.

Like Threadneedle, Columbia had a level of assets directly associated with its former parent, as well as assets that were influenced by relationships with the bank or its affiliates.

We approached the transaction in a similar manner to Threadneedle – to build on the existing asset and client base, leverage strong investment performance and product offerings, and expand third-party and institutional distribution relationships.

While outflows of assets directly associated with the bank’s pension and institutional area are largely behind us, we’ll continue to experience several billion of ongoing outflows annually from our relationship with the bank and bank affiliated distribution. In addition, we expect some level of outflows from a key sub-advisor.

The core of the Columbia business is strong. We’re beginning to make good progress on growing in third party and institutional. We have good traction in our Focus Funds and we’re working to expand this more broadly across our intermediary platforms. As well, we’re building a broader institutional pipeline and beginning to win more institutional mandates.

Looking ahead, we expect flows to improve gradually this year. Here’s what you can expect from an overall business perspective:

Both Threadneedle and Columbia will experience outflows from assets that were directly or indirectly affiliated with the former parent companies – the majority being lower-fee business.

We will leverage our platforms to build flows through third party distribution and in both the retail and institutional channels. We’re organizing the efforts of Columbia and Threadneedle to use the strengths of the investment teams to better compete in the global marketplace with high-demand products such as emerging markets, asset allocation and global.

We’re always focused on generating consistently strong investment performance, building on our product portfolio of 118 4- and 5-star funds. In fact, Columbia won 5 new Lipper Awards in the quarter.

Reengineering remains a priority to maintain good profitability and margins as our flows evolve.

And finally, we will make decisions to drive profitable net inflows. For example, we’re executing our plans to align share classes to certain distribution channels. In the case of our RIA changes, it may impact flows in the near-term in exchange for improved earnings.

Overall, I’m optimistic about this business and what we can do with this business. We have talented people, good investment processes, solid performance, and expanding distribution. We’re focused on gaining flows and building from the strong foundation we have in place over the medium-term.
Let’s move to Annuities and Insurance:

In Annuities, our business is strong and performing well. We’re generating good returns on a business that has a good risk profile with strong hedging.

Our flows are improving in our new Volatility Control product. In addition, we’re building out the product line by launching 3 new managed volatility funds to help serve an even broader range of client and advisor needs.

As we move forward, we will also emphasize variable annuities without a living benefit rider to add to our already strong book. We’re launching 21 new investment options, including more advice-embedded solutions, new asset classes like alternatives and commodities and more funds in asset classes where tax deferral is valuable. This is a good business for us and we’re looking to grow this book again.

With regard to fixed annuities, they continue to be in net outflows due to the effects of the interest rate climate and the reduced client appetite for these products. As we look to 2014, we’ll be able to re-price a portion of the book that will take some of the pressure from this product line off our margins.

In Protection:

Our insurance business is also performing well with good profitability in the quarter. We have a diversified portfolio that is mostly comprised of Variable Universal Life, cash value focused Universal Life, Disability Insurance and term products that are not significantly impacted by the interest rate environment. We’re beginning to see a nice pick up in sales of life products with cash sales growing 12% year-over year. We’re also pleased to see sales grow in our Variable Universal Life product, as well as continued steady growth in our indexed Universal Life.

In Ameriprise Auto & Home, we had solid policy growth - up 9% - from our affinity partners and within the Ameriprise channel resulting in premiums grew nicely, up
7%. Expenses were managed well although momentum was affected offset by increased reserves for an auto liability loss development. Client satisfaction and retention for Auto and Home remains strong.

To summarize, we had a good quarter. We continue to execute the strategy we laid out for you in November and we’re making good progress. We’re investing to maintain good capabilities while maintaining tight control of expenses.

Now I’d like to hand things over to Walter for a detailed review of the numbers.
Thank you, Jim.

Ameriprise delivered strong financial results, particularly in our key areas of growth – Advice & Wealth Management and Asset Management. These two segments represent 60% of our total revenues and grew 8% on a combined basis when you normalize for exiting the bank.

In Protection and Annuities, revenues grew in line with our expectations, particularly in light of continued low interest rates.

Let’s turn to earnings on slide 4.
Pretax earnings from Advice & Wealth Management and Asset Management together increased over 30% excluding bank earnings in the 2012 quarter.

Similar to the revenue picture, we are seeing the same trend for operating pretax earnings in these segments.

Let’s turn to EPS on slide 5.
Excluding the bank, we had a solid 13% growth in operating EPS to $1.59 per share. As we said, we plan to return 100%+ of earnings to shareholders this year, plus the $375 million freed up from exiting the bank. The return of capital associated with the bank will effectively offset the lost bank earnings from an EPS perspective by year-end. However, because of timing, earnings per share was impacted $0.04 on year-over-year basis.

Return on equity hit an all-time high in the quarter at 16.4% and we see an opportunity for further ROE expansion in 2013 and over the long term.

Moving to the segment discussions....
In Advice & Wealth Management, the strong year-over-year PTI growth trends were driven by underlying fundamentals of the business.

Client assets grew 11% to $372 billion and we had record wrap net inflows of $4.1 billion. Advisor metrics were strong: we continued to recruit high-quality experienced advisors with continued high retention rates. Advisor productivity reached a record high of $104,000.

In the quarter, low interest rates had a negative impact of $10 million on earnings year-over-year. The impact of low rates will be approximately $10 million per quarter for the balance of the year.

As Jim said, we remain focused on managing expenses. Excluding the bank, G&A expenses were down 3%, primarily from the wind down of the brokerage platform conversion expense. Year-over-year new brokerage platform related expenses declined $8 million, though a nominal amount of training expense will remain for the next quarter or two. We will continue to invest in business growth initiatives, but we do not see any projects of this magnitude in the near term.

One of the most compelling results in the quarter is the AWM margin, which on a reported basis was 12.9%, up 300 basis points - good results in their own right. If we exclude the bank from the prior quarter, margins would have expanded 430 basis points over the prior year.
Turning to Asset Management, we had solid earnings of $144 million, up 10% over last year. We are able to deliver earnings growth despite being in outflows by re-engineering our revenue and expense bases.

In the quarter, we had one less fee day, which impacted revenue growth and profitability.

Overall operating expenses were up 4%, primarily from the impact of market appreciation on distribution fees, and G&A expenses remain well controlled.

As always, we will continue to focus on both revenue and expense reengineering opportunities to maintain solid profitability and margins, make the necessary choices particularly around fee levels to ensure our flows are profitable, and execute the strategies necessary to achieve positive flows.

Let’s turn to flows in more detail on the next slide.
In the quarter, we had a total of $5.7 billion of outflows. This was higher than anticipated, but consistent with prior patterns of outflows in a few specific areas.

For retail, overall flows were flat, with strong $1.7 billion of inflows at Threadneedle. This was driven by strong consumer confidence and good sales in a few key products, particularly in Europe.

We recognize that U.S. retail flows remain a challenge. First, a large distribution partner continued to re-balance asset concentrations. Second, we had continued outflows from a third party sub-advisor. As we mentioned last quarter, we are also taking actions to improve the profitability of flows by changing the share class that we are offering in the RIA channel. This resulted in outflows this quarter and we expect to see more over the next few quarters.

For institutional, outflows were high at $5.5 billion, though primarily from low-fee assets. At Threadneedle, $2.2 billion of the outflows were largely from normal outflows from legacy insurance assets and also included $1.0 billion from a mandate in Japan that we previously disclosed.

For institutional at Columbia, there were approximately $1.0 billion of outflows from low basis point assets, including Balboa. In addition, several clients took money off the table in both investment grade and high yield credit mandates given strong performance in these asset classes.
Turning to annuities, operating pretax earnings was $156 million, which was in line with our expectation.

Variable annuity operating pretax earnings were $109 million, down 18% from the prior year period. First quarter results were impacted by a $7 million higher DAC amortization and benefits expense related to our third quarter 2012 unlocking, which we discussed last quarter. Additionally, there was $10 million less favorable mean reversion compared to a year ago and the prior year period included a $20 million favorable actuarial model adjustment.

In fixed annuities, operating pretax earnings declined $9 million. The pressure from low interest rates continued to impact the fixed annuity block. In the first quarter, the impact from low interest rates was $17 million on a gross basis. Partially offsetting this was a benefit to investment income from the accretion associated with assets transferred from the bank in the fourth quarter.

We expect the pretax earnings impact of low interest rates to be $15 - $20 million per quarter for fixed annuities. By year-end, we will begin lowering our interest rate exposure by resetting rates on a large 5-year guarantee block of fixed annuities.

As we previously mentioned, we adopted a new methodology for allocating equity to our product lines in the quarter. The new methodology reflects the higher requirement of rating agencies or regulators, and also allocates contingent capital for stress scenarios mainly to support our variable annuity book. This quarter, the annuity segment’s return on equity was a strong 16.2%.
Moving to Protection on slide 10.

Operating pretax earnings were in line with our expectations at $110 million. The continued strong results in our Life & Health businesses were offset by lower earnings for Auto & Home.

Life & Health earnings were strong in the quarter from favorable disability and long-term care claims experience. It was a good quarter for sales. Both Variable Universal Life and Indexed Universal Life sales were up after refreshing our product last year.

Auto & Home has continued strong new policy sales growth across market segments, primarily from our affinity relationships with Costco and Progressive. However, earnings were a bit lower as we built reserves related to prior year loss development.

The Protection segment generated a strong 16.7% operating return on allocated equity in the period.
Let’s turn to capital on the next slide.

We returned $454 million to shareholders through dividends and share repurchase in the first quarter. We have been able to consistently return more than 100% of earnings to shareholders due to our business mix shift, risk management capabilities and strong balance sheet fundamentals.

For the rest of 2013, we anticipate that our capital actions will drive continued ROE expansion and will neutralize the EPS impact of exiting the bank by the year-end.

As Jim said, we announced that our board of directors has approved an increase in our quarterly dividend to $0.52 per share after our regular, annual dividend review. This dividend brings us to a 2.9% dividend yield, and is in line with our strategy to move toward a greater portion of our capital returned in the form of shareholder dividends.

With that, we will take your questions.
